

TIGER "HITTERS" NEEDED TO BEAT CRIMSON TEAM

Rush Said to Have Many New Plays to Offset Harvard

By W. O. MCGEEHAN

The first crucial drive of the Eastern football season is scheduled for Saturday afternoon at the Soldiers' Field today, where the Princeton eleven, trained by John Harlan Rush, meets the Harvard eleven, coached and otherwise perfected under the direction of Percy D. Haughton.

Last year about this time a Haughton team journeyed to Princeton and defeated a Tiger aggregation that seemed full of promise on the early season showing. The same Haughtonized team later in the year massacred and disintegrated the Yale eleven at Soldiers' Field.

The Princeton forces this year have really a weaker team to contend with on paper, but the Haughton system during the Cornell game showed symptoms of considerable strength. It is not the material of Harvard that has disconcerted Princeton backers so that they feel that their team should be short-enders, but the intangible Haughton system.

Princeton has established a fairly consistent record for the preliminary work of this season. On the defensive the Black and Orange line seems to be made up of solid concrete, and bags and some barbed wire entanglements. The Princetonians have not been scored against this season.

Lack Driving Power

It is the driving power that seems to be lacking in the Princeton machine. The line seems capable of holding against any sort of an attack, but no purely defensive team can win football games any more than a perfect fielding baseball team can win baseball games without the aid of a few hitters.

There is no doubt that the Princeton line should be able to bore plenty of holes in the red-jerseyed phalanx. Cornell did it, and the centre trio of Princeton this year looks more powerful than the centre trio that Cornell sent in against Harvard. But those who saw the Cornell-Harvard game noticed that, while the Harvard first line defence was generally weak, the second line defence checked nearly every rush of Cornell.

It is whispered that John Harlan Rush has a whole box of new tricks to uncover to-day. He probably will need them, and they will have to be particularly subtle pieces of strategy to catch that Harvard second line defence off guard.

Casey and Horween

It is probable that the task of advancing the ball will devolve chiefly upon Casey and Horween, as was the scheme in the game with Cornell. Horween is a remarkably effective line plunger, and Casey is a tricky runner in the law as far as illegal hurdling is concerned.

Eddie Casey, who carried the ball for the greater part of the successful drive against Cornell, is one of the trickiest backs that ever dodged through a broken field, not excepting his predecessors, Mahan and Bricker. Part of Casey's effectiveness is due to the fact that he is left-handed, and his moves are hard to anticipate.

When Casey is starting a forward pass the fact that he is a southpaw is considerably in his favor. The tackler, seeing him with the ball in his left hand, dodges about, preparing for him to shift it.

Tibbott May Not Start

It seems now that Dave Tibbott, the greatest of the drop kickers, may not start in the Princeton line-up. But if the game should become close and the Orange and Black should maneuver into position for a field goal, Tibbott may be a busy cat for Dave Tibbott. David can be a busy cat for Dave Tibbott. David can be a busy cat for Dave Tibbott.

But the indications are that the burden of the game will be on the Harvard-Cornell game. "And Casey carries the ball."

BROWN HOPEFUL, BUT LOOKS FOR BITTER BATTLE

Providence, Nov. 10.—The annual Brown-Yale football game at the Yale Bowl to-morrow should be a two-team pretty evenly matched. The Providence eleven is in high hope of repeating last year's victory over the Bulldogs.

A Brown team has come across with a victory over the New Haven eleven in two games thus far—in 1910, by the decisive score of 21 to 0, and last year, by the score of 3 to 0.

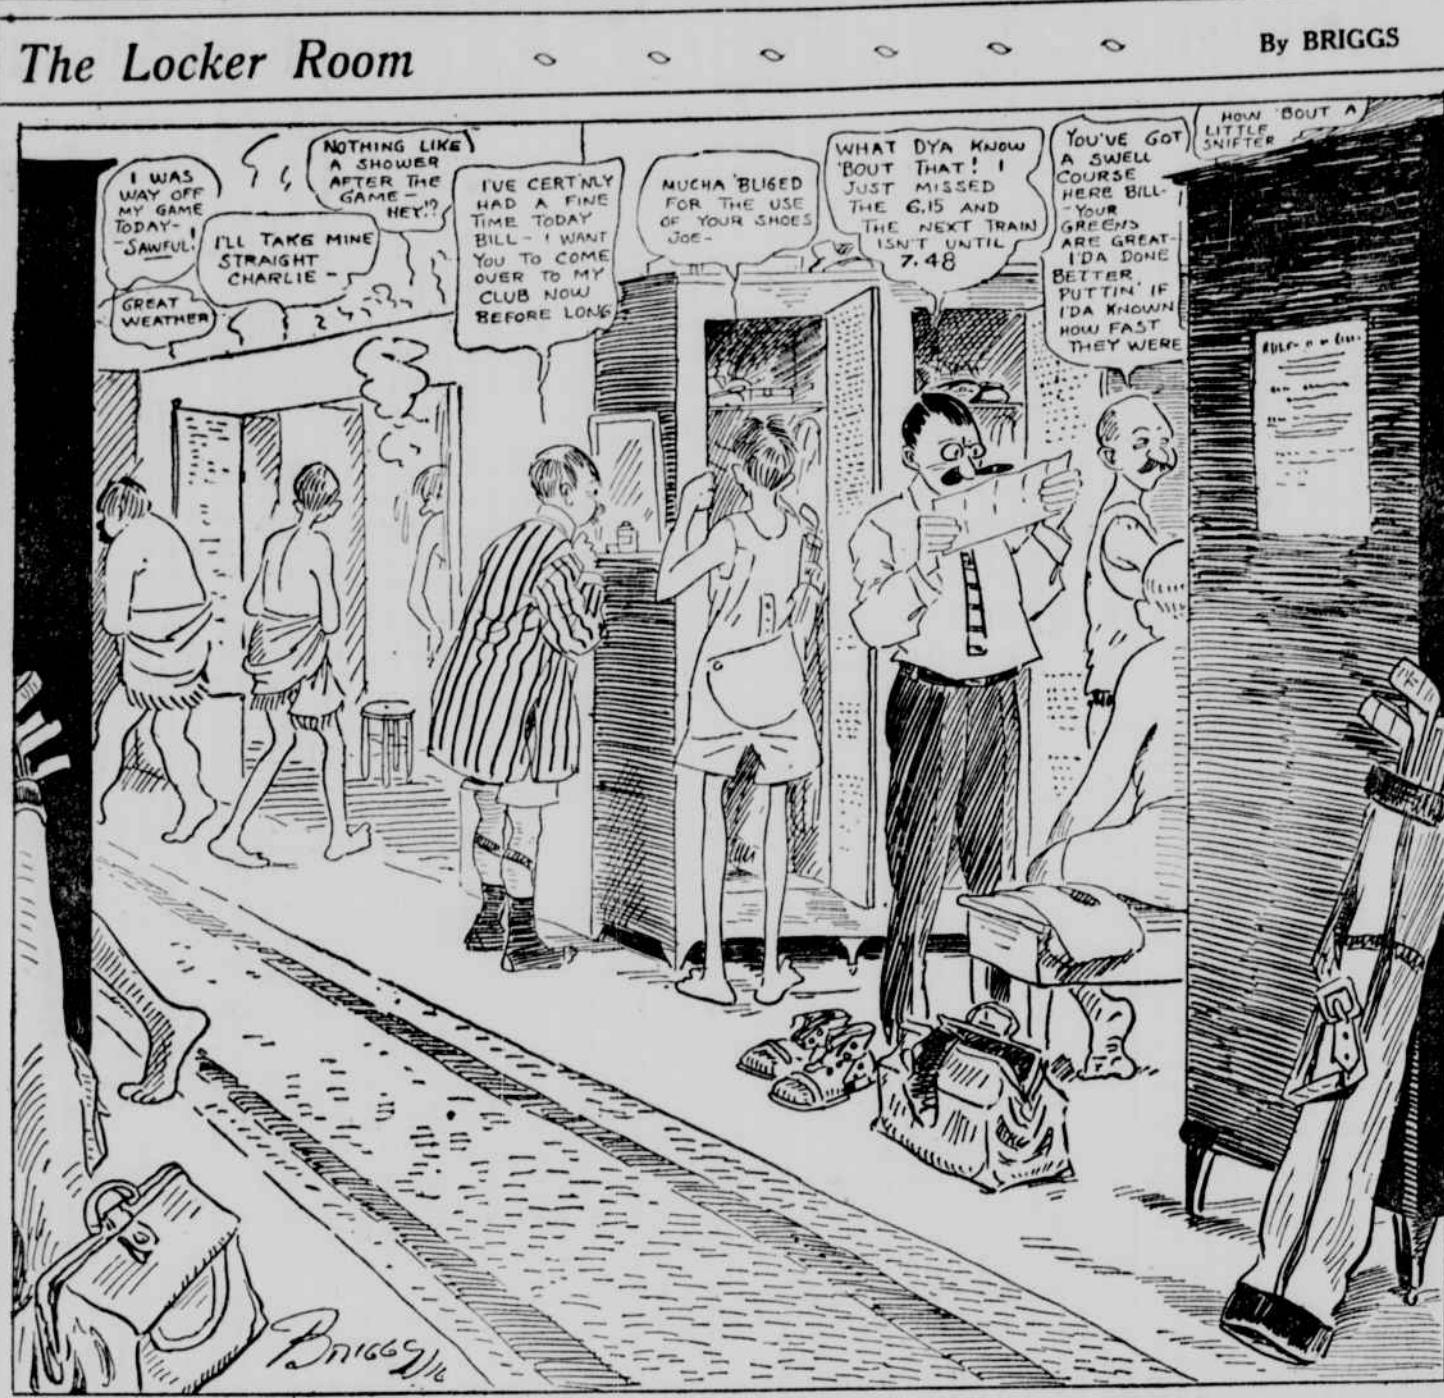

The Brown backfield will have only one fullback—but if all goes well he manages to escape wrenching his knee again Hillhouse will be all that the Brown team will need, both for kicking and plunging. Purdy is now in shape and will start at quarter, while Pollard, Jemil, Brooks and Annan will take care of the two halfback positions.

The Brown men had a light workout this afternoon. The Brown starting lineup will be:

GOLF ASSOCIATION MEETS ON DEC. 12

The Metropolitan Golf Association will hold its annual meeting and dinner at Delmonico's on December 12. The nominating committee has selected the following ticket: President, J. B. Tappin; vice-president, C. J. Sullivan; secretary, E. H. Barnes; treasurer, George H. Barnes; members of executive committee, James A. King, A. H. Pogson, Paul Moore, A. M. Reid and J. F. Shanley.

BADLY BATTERED COLUMBIA TEAM IN GAME TO-DAY

Injuries Mar Chances of Heights Boys Against Swarthmore Eleven

The football eleven of Swarthmore College, conqueror of Lafayette, Pennsylvania, Franklin and Marshall, Ursinus and Johns Hopkins, will meet the crippled and battered team of Columbia University at South Field this afternoon.

At Ohio Field, on University Heights, New York University will face the eleven from Colby College, while Stevens Institute of Technology will give battle to the Connecticut Aggies at Castle Point Field at Hoboken.

These are the three tidbits offered to local football enthusiasts who, for one reason or another, will be unable to attend the battle between the Tiger and John Harvard, or the Yale and Brown game.

Squad Demoralized

Columbia faces the game with Swarthmore with no great feeling of confidence. Injuries have reduced the squad to a point where Metcalf has to handle the men with gloves, for fear of adding to the casualty list.

First, one man and then another was cut down, and it is small wonder, then, that only one game has been won. No coach can well expect to develop team work when he is forced to work with a different combination every other day or so.

The team that will take the field this afternoon is not the best that could be marshaled from the Blue and White forces were every man in the best condition. But it is the best team that can be built from the material at hand. The loss of Healy at this time is staggering.

While the Stevens team is more often than not beat his ends down the field under punts.

With another man at left tackle, an additional burden will be thrown on the line, the end who is not any too robust at his best. Vollmer, who may play left tackle, did fairly well against Williams, but he showed plainly that he has much to learn about inside football.

Jimmy Cleveland will start the game at right tackle, in all probability, with Riegner at guard. It is possible that Bud Wilber will be at tackle for a while, and Sterling Van de Water will probably get into the game at guard. The backfield will be composed of McCabe, Dunn, I. T. Rosen and Hegeman.

Hard Fighting Team

Those who have seen Swarthmore in action declare it to be a swift, hard fighting team, well grounded in football, and possessed of a powerful, versatile attack. Smith, the left end, is one of the speediest in the East, and he has a reputation as a deadly tackler. Riddpath, the centre, is another who stands out by his work; while Endicott, a tackle, is ranked with the best by some critics. Rush, the fullback, is a better man than Sam Williams still shudders at the mere mention of that name.

Captain Rube Bernstein will lead his team against the Colby eleven this afternoon, or so it was announced by Dick Eustis last night, at any rate. His foot has healed nicely, and he expects to remain in the game throughout. He will be needed, too, for Colby will take the field inspired by the confidence gained in holding the Harvard team to ten points early in the season. The Maine team is reported to be in excellent condition, and primed for a hard game.

Harvard's Advantage Slight with Tigers

Crimson Attack Best Asset of Haughton's System, Defence Princeton's

By GRANTLAND RICE

Princeton's chance to overthrow the Haughton system this afternoon depends largely upon two elements:

1. The generalship of Princeton's quarterback.
2. The alertness of Princeton's defence in meeting that deceptive, bewildering Harvard attack.

If a third element must be added it will be in the power of Princeton's backfield drive. But since this power is not there the Tiger offence must depend upon the attack that Rush has mapped out, which can succeed only if Princeton forwards outplay their Crimson rivals.

Princeton, in this game, has a slightly better line from tackle to tackle; ends that compare favorably enough with Harvard's; a kicker in Briggs that will easily come up to the Horween standard.

But Harvard still has this advantage—or these advantages—two reliable quarterbacks and a backfield possessing both speed and the punch.

Princeton has a Briggs to offset Horween; but Princeton hasn't yet shown a halfback to offset Murray, nor a quarterback to offset Murray and Robinson. And in this modern game a high class quarterback is a big factor and generally a winning one.

Harvard the Favorite

While Harvard will be the favorite entry, there is still this to figure in Princeton's favor:

Last fall Rush, with hard early games to face, brought his eleven forward at top speed. The Tiger instance was forced to this pass by his schedule.

This season, regardless of the Tufts and Dartmouth games, he determined to centre every move upon his Harvard and Yale contests. So Princeton, through October, looked weaker than usual, largely because the team had drawn slower development.

Heretofore Princeton has always been a great October array, with a decided falling off in November.

This time Rush let the October games take care of themselves. He made no effort to reach anything like top form for any early game. The odds, therefore, are that Princeton will be an entirely different array from what it was up to last Monday. Early this week the squad, for the first time, seemed to have found itself. The old sluggishness of the early season was missing. The line suddenly developed an aggressiveness it had not known all fall, while the work of Moore in the backfield added confidence to the Tiger attack.

Moore Dangerous Man

Moore is almost as dangerous as Eddie Casey. He is a pretty fast runner, but quite so good at squirming through an opening.

All these things must be considered before awarding the game to Harvard in advance. Harvard undoubtedly has the advantage, but it is a slight advantage at best, an advantage that might easily be wiped out if Princeton happens to find herself, as she generally does, in a Harvard game.

QUAKERS' FINAL DRILL PLEASES COACH FOLWELL

Berry, Recovered, Will Be Held in Reserve to Decide Issue with Dartmouth

Philadelphia, Nov. 10.—Coach Folwell sent the Penn team through a short, snappy signal drill on the St. Luke's School gridiron at Wayne this afternoon, but did not try out any of the trick plays taught the men this week, as there were too many visitors on hand watching the Red and Blue work-out.

Coach Pleased with Quakers

After the signal drill, Berry, Bryant, Quigley and Williams were given a punting drill, while Berry and Quigley practised drop and placement kicking. Folwell announced after the practice that he was well pleased with the team's working and felt confident that it is certain that Berry will be in the game before he has gone very far, while it is possible that he will be called upon to try a field goal the first time Penn is held for three downs in Dartmouth's territory.

Berry Held in Reserve

Berry's injured knee is as strong as ever, but he will not start the game, as Folwell does not want to break up a smooth-working backfield combination. It is certain that Berry will be in the game before he has gone very far, while it is possible that he will be called upon to try a field goal the first time Penn is held for three downs in Dartmouth's territory.

Stevens Squad Ready for Game with Farmers

Practice at Stevens was somewhat late in starting yesterday afternoon, being delayed by the Stevens Preparatory game, which, incidentally, was won by Barringer, 24 to 0. There was still enough time, however, for Rodgers to run the varsity through a fast signal drill in final preparation for the game with the Connecticut Aggies scheduled in Hoboken for to-day.

All the regulars were in harness with the exception of Musk. He reported, but was so stiff from bruises the coach set him directing the work of one of the secondary teams. Hopkins was on the field also, and will in all probability start to-day against the farmers, although Rodgers had Carlson at end for the major part of the day's practice. Harter ran the varsity all afternoon, and will start at the quarterback position this afternoon.

The engineers will probably line up as follows: Hopkins and Lofquist, ends; Ford and Flockhart, tackles; Mueller and Etzel, guards; Johnson, centre; Harter, quarterback; Marshall and Goodale, halves, and Webb, fullback.

RENSSELAER POLY TO PLAY WORCESTER TECH

Troy, N. Y., Nov. 10.—With the aid of the "shot ball" and electric arc lights, Coach Reed has whipped the Rensselaer Poly eleven into shape for the game with Worcester Tech to-morrow.

O'Hara is still out of the game, and from all reports will not be able to come on the field again this season. Porter, who was pulled out of the squad of second-string men last week, is still working on the varsity eleven at right halfback, and from all appearances will hold the position for the rest of the season.

MANLIUS CADETS PLAY CORNELL'S FRESHMEN

Ithaca, Nov. 10.—The Cornell freshman eleven, with a tie game, 7 to 7, over the varsity second team last week, is preparing hard for the Manlius cadet aggregation, one of the strongest teams in Central New York, which comes here Saturday.

Shuler, Cornell's best freshman back, will be in the game again.

35,000 WILL SEE HARVARD CLASH WITH PRINCETON

Both Teams Confident of Outcome of To-day's Stadium Game

How Harvard and Princeton Line Up

PRINCETON.	POS.	HARVARD.
Higley	L. E.	Coollidge
McGraw	L. T.	Wheeler
Nourse	L. G.	Taylor
Gennert	C.	Harris
Hogg	R. G.	Dadmun
McLean	R. T.	Sweetser
Wilson	R. E.	Harte
Eddy	Q. B.	Murray
Brown	L. H.	Casey
Moore	R. H.	Thatcher
Driggs	F. B.	Horween

Boston, Nov. 10.—Both Harvard and Princeton had their final work-outs for their big game to-morrow in the Stadium this afternoon.

For the Crimson, which came out early, the drill consisted of some kicking for the punters, a brisk run on kick-offs, catching punts and then a fast work-out on signals.

These stunts over, the Harvard varsity disappeared, and soon after 3 o'clock the Jerseysmen, who arrived here after an all-day trip from Princeton, went behind the closed gates of the Stadium.

Harvard will line up as heretofore announced with Coollidge and Harte, ends; Wheeler and Sweetser, tackles; Dadmun and Snow, guards; Harris, centre, and Murray, Thatcher, Horween and Casey in the backfield.

Alternates in Backfield

The Tigers ran through signals with both sets of ends and with Moore and Brown in the backfield alternately. The last word from Coach Rush, however, is that Higley and Wilson will start on the wings and that Moore will be in the backfield with Driggs, Tibbott and Eddy.

Both teams appear to be very confident. Harvard is still sure it can win the game, unless Princeton plays far better football than anything it has shown in its earlier matches this fall.

Princeton, on the other hand, is equally sure that the team will be able to show better football than heretofore and that if fumbling can be eliminated the chances will be even.

Both teams apparently are in the finest of physical condition for the game. The Tigers, after their work-out to-day, went to the Vesper Country Club, near Lowell, Mass., but will make an early start in the morning for Boston.

Tiger Veterans Primed

There will be nearly 35,000 at the game to-morrow, and clear and colder weather is predicted for the game.

The Harvard coaches have little concern for their offence and feel that it is the defence that will hold the first quarter of the game the Crimson will gain more confidence and will be able to score at least two touchdowns.

Coch Rush said before going to Lowell to-night that his team of veterans is in every way primed to play its best football and to put on a much better game than it played against the Crimson at Princeton a year ago.

ARMY MAY USE SUBS IN GAME WITH MAINE MEN

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 10.—The Army football men had light work this afternoon on the evening of the contest with the University of Maine here to-morrow. The cadets used the ball about, punted, rehearsed a few forward pass formations and wound up with a brief signal drill.

The soldiers do not look for strong opposition from Maine, and the coaches are considering the advisability of saving some of the big fellows and sending the reserves into the game at the kick-off. All the varsity men are in condition, and if necessity demands they will be used at some stage of the game.

The Maine team arrived here at noon from Orono and took a short drill on the Plains this afternoon. They are ready to start the game, and will be fast and displayed plenty of ginger in their practice.

COLLEGE BOWLING MEN TO DRAW UP SCHEDULE

Troy, N. Y., Nov. 10.—According to A. H. Johnson, vice-president of the Intercollegiate Bowling League and a member of Rensselaer Poly's bowling team, representatives of the bowling associations of Yale, Cornell, Lehigh, Stevens, Syracuse and Rensselaer Poly, who constitute the league, will meet soon to draw up a schedule for the first tournament of the league.

Matches will probably begin the last of the month, all scoring between the teams being recorded by telegraph.

The elimination tournament, which will decide the members of Rensselaer's team, will be finished next Monday, and it is expected the Engineers will have a strong team, with Bussey, Johnson, Ross and Boland as a nucleus around which to build.

The PORT-LIGHT by Grantland Rice

By Way of Confession

Off in the still night,
To grab an old report,
I sit me down to write
About the realm of sport—

To toss stuff into rhyme
On Haughton, Rush or Cobb,
To while away the time
Upon a daily job.

Sometimes I make a bluff
At dope you shouldn't miss,
And then again the stuff
Is quite as bad as this.

Princeton now has only two elevens left to beat to finish the season without a defeat. Nobody in the way now but Harvard and Yale.

From the Other Game

Dear Sir: We are in another game over here, one just a trifle rougher than football. But don't think for a minute we have forgotten the good old game. How about Harvard, Yale and Princeton? Is Percy Haughton still tying the opposing defence into knots? Has any one come to take the Mahan place? Can Yost put away Cornell? I had a tip that Minnesota had the Western Conference championship nailed down; how about it? We want to know all about it, and over here we can't even guess. W. & R. (Canadian Expeditionary Forces), (Somewhere in ———).

The Haughton System

A Gentle, possibly, Reader writes in to know just what is meant by the Haughton System in football.

The bulk of it amounts to this—to launch a deceptive attack, so well covered that no defence can be traced to meet the rush.

An eleven might face Harvard with a strong, powerful defence. But unless this defence was also exceedingly alert and quick to diagnose a play, it would be of little value.

For Haughton puts through few direct, non-deceptive plays. There is, in most cases, a threat one way and a rush the other. And to vary this he uses the direct attack only often enough to keep the guessing contest under way.

In this manner Haughton prevents any defence from becoming set for his charge. He always takes away quite a bit of any opposing aggressiveness, for there is no great elation in charging forward to spill a play when one has a hunch that he is probably charging in the wrong direction. The moment a defence becomes bewildered, its efficiency is destroyed. For, after this, it will probably fail to charge forward in any direction at all. No man in football has developed this combination of threat and deception upon as equal as well as the Harvard mandarin. In this respect, at least, he has no equal.

Another Effect

One effect of this deceptive quality upon attack is to make the other eleven look far worse than it really is.

Harvard in 1915 was nothing like 36 to 0 above Yale. Harvard last year was not 41 to 0 beyond the Blue. Harvard this fall was not 23 to 0 above Cornell—man for man or team for team. But the answer is that Yale and Cornell, last fall and this season, became so badly bewildered that their defence flew wide apart, leaving thin strata of air for the Crimson backs to buck.

* A team can fight doggedly enough against a powerful attack that is driving in straight and hard. But an attack that bewilders more than it overwhelms is sure to do far greater damage.

Revised Again

I shot a golf ball into the air;
It fell to earth, I know not where;
But on looking around in the rough I found a new Silver King and a new Dunlop, whereas the ball I had lost was pretty well battered up.

Baldridge, Tackle at Yale, Is Added to Hospital List

New Haven, Nov. 10.—No Yale football players were injured to-day, as no scrimmage practice was ordered, but the hospital list was swollen by the addition of Baldridge, right tackle, whose injury, received two days ago, was diagnosed as severe enough to keep him from playing against Brown to-morrow and to make it impossible for him again to attain his best physical condition before the season closes. A careful examination disclosed the fact that he had a broken rib.

Baldridge has been in every game since the season started, and is regarded as the most prominent candidate for captain of next year's eleven. He will be sent into the Princeton and Harvard game heavily bruised.

Jacques Not Ready

Another player who was relied upon for service to-morrow, Emil Jacques, fullback, is still physically unfit to play. He has been out of the game for nearly three weeks. It is doubtful whether he will be used at all, but should Yale have a chance to win in the final period, he may be called in the play for a few minutes.

For the first time this season Yale faces likely defeat on the eve of a scheduled game. The coaches insist on carrying out their policy of saving every player who is not in tip-top condition for the Princeton match next Saturday, and the eleven selected for the game contains only a single veteran, Captain Black, at left guard.

Comerford, Smith and Gates are the only three regulars of this season's games who will be found in the line-up, and the defence was forced to leave its regular position at left end and go to left tackle, because of a lack of reserve material for that position. His fellow tackle replacing Baldridge, who is Larry Fox, the oarsman, who has had not started the game. Fox, who has been in his life and who has played only one game.

The coaches have decided to rest Harry E. Gore, Charley Taft and Charles Galt are all physically unfit to play. Galt and Hutchinson will play centre. Harold Carey has been assigned to left halfback, which has been vacated permanently by the illness of Bob Bingham.

Stewart at Fullback

A surprise was announced in the selection of Charley Stewart for fullback. His work has proved superior to that of Jim Braden, who will be held in reserve for the second half. Joe Neville will take Le Gore's berth at right halfback, and the punting assignment has been handed to him.

Betting to-night favored Brown, 5 to 3, although Yale's substitute eleven, which has been selected for to-morrow's game, is fast and is physically well conditioned.

To-day's closing practice consisted of an hour's drill in signals and punting. Foster Rockwell was the only visiting coach. To-morrow's lineup will be:

PENN STATE MEN POLISH UP PLAYS FOR GAME TO-DAY

State College, Penn. Nov. 10.—The final grooming of Penn State's team for the big clash with Lehigh to-morrow was finished this afternoon by Coach Harlow and Martin. New plays were polished up in a brisk signal practice, and the defence was perfected in a short drill, devoted to running down the field under punts.

The varsity backs were instructed how to stop opposing efforts from covering the man catching punts. Robb, the regular right halfback, worked with Captain Clark, Beck and Ewing in the signal practice, but he took no part in the open field tackling. Robb's punting is slowly improving, and he may be able to start against the Brown and White.

Either Jones or Hess will get the place if Robb is not in condition. Cubbage and Parrish were alternated at left guard. It's a toss-up between them for the berth in Saturday's game. Ewing's improvement in general play this week has reinstated him at quarterback. Ege, the regular left end, will not make the trip.

Honor for John Collier

Ithaca, N. Y., Nov. 10.—John Collier, assistant coach of the Cornell crew team, has been elected president of the Cornell regatta council, the university's governing body.
